The walking trail is adjacent to the famous Bingham-Waggoner home. The home was built for John Lewis and in 1899, William H. Waggoner remodeled the house extensively. In 1864, the property was bought by George Caleb Bingham, a famous Missouri painter. One of Mr. Bingham’s infamous paintings is “Order No. 11.” The Santa Fe Trail originally ran along the east side of the property, later switching to the west side of the property. The walking trail is located behind the stately house. To access the trail, walk across the footbridge. The trail is a hard-surface trail with some mild inclines and is surrounded by the swales created by the wagon trains passing through the property in the 1830s. (Foerster, 1978, p. 99)
This park was named after the Bundschu family, who owned a store on the east side of the Independence Square. Mr. Bundschu once said, “It is pretty hard for you to visualize the difference between Independence and Kansas City after the Civil War. We looked down upon Kansas City as just a tough river town.” The welfare office relied on Mr. Bundschu when funds were low. When asked “What would you like most to see accomplished for Independence?” He replied, “The building of the bridge at Courtney and completion of the roads and viaducts to make it effective.” (Wilcox, 1979, p.71)
Clothier Park was dedicated in 2010 in honor of Dr. Robert W. Clothier. “Dr. Bob,” as he was affectionately known, was a noted pediatrician and community leader who impacted the lives of numerous children in the Independence community and believed in making a difference.
For 36 years, Fairmount Park was a place for summer fun and water sports. ("Many Parks," 1973) Canoes and boats were available for rental and a beach was available for sunbathers and swimmers. There was a two-story bathhouse and amusement park for the community to enjoy as well. Originally an eight-acre lake was located at the park; now Highway 24 is located there. According to the Kansas City Star, "The park was Arthur Stillwell's creation and was planned primarily to furnish trade for his air-line interurban line, which ran from 2nd and Grand in Kansas City to Independence. Records show that as many as $15,000 in fares were collected in a single day. Between 1897 and 1901, a nine-hole golf course was maintained by the private Evanston Golf Club. In 1933, the park suffered a major fire. Between the fire, a problem with water pollution, and the great depression, the park closed. Fairmount Park is located east of this older park and has been named after it."
This section of Jackson County was settled in the 1820s. The property, which later became George Owens Nature Park, was acquired from the government by Thomas Stayton, a prominent pioneer in Jackson County. The majority of the park was at one time cleared and used for farming. During the past 100 years, various fields were abandoned, which allowed the natural process of ecological succession to occur. Today, most of the park is covered with trees, resembling the foliage-covered land the pioneers first discovered. (Independence Parks & Recreation Department, 2005).
In 1927 the Jackson County Court accepted a 12-acre gift as a memorial to William M. Hill, son of Adam Hill, an 1833 Jackson County Pioneer. The Hill Family Cemetery is located within the park and includes Rock Creek and limestone outcroppings. The once rundown park is now in a state of regeneration and has recently sprung back to life. In 2005, a skateboard facility was built for the youth and the young-at-heart. A hard-surface walking trail, a playground, and a shelter have been added. (Wilcox, 1979, p. 154)

This 165-acre complex is one of the most unique in the country in that it sits atop the Space Center, Inc. warehouse, a 4.4 million square-foot subsurface complex of office, warehouse and light manufacturing space.
LITTLE BLUE TRACE TRAIL

This trail follows the Little Blue River and winds through forest and farmland. When heading north on the trail, mile markers on the ground to the left of the trail help guide the way. Composed of rock with paved portions, the trail's surrounding area is also scenic and fairly flat with a few hills. Historic markers along the trail include the Indian Trace Trail, Trail of Tears, and the Battle of Westport. This trail is a wonderful place to view wildlife. (Jackson County Parks & Recreation Department, 2005)

Entrances are located at Blue Mills Rd., Ripely Junction, Bundschu Rd., M-78 shelter just west of Hwy. 7 and Necessary Rd. at R.D.Mize Rd.

WALKING BENEFITS-AREAS OF THE BODY

Walking Benefits

Arms
Abs
Knees and Ankles
Upper and Lower Legs
Hips and Butt

If you thought walking was just putting one foot in front of the other, you were right! But check out these tips for how to walk and breathe correctly so your walk will be safer and easier.

Posture. How you hold your body is important. Stand up straight and tall. This means putting your shoulders back and relaxing them (no slouching!), and keeping your chin up and stomach in. It’s a good idea to look 20 feet ahead—about the length of two cars. This keeps your chin up and your eyes on your path!

Taking your first steps. Start your first step with the heel first. Then roll your foot from heel to toe and push off the toes with the next step. Bring the opposite leg forward, repeat this again. (This may feel a little funny at first but as your muscles get stronger it gets easier.)

Arm motion. Moving or swinging your arms when you’re walking can give you power and it balances what your legs are doing! Bend your elbows 90 degrees (so your arms look like the letter “L”), while keeping your hands slightly curled. When you step, one foot moves forward and the arm opposite this foot should come forward too. As your foot goes back, bring back the opposite arm with it. Keep your elbows close to the body so you don’t have “chicken wings.”

Don’t forget to breathe! Your breathing should have a rhythm. Inhale one deep breath for four steps and then hold that breath for two steps. Then exhale to the count of four steps, and hold it for two steps before beginning all over again. So the rhythm is — breathe in (step 1, 2, 3, 4), hold (step 1, 2) breathe out (step 1, 2, 3, 4) hold (step 1, 2).

Everyone’s stride is different, so if you feel that four steps are too long or too short, adjust it to what is comfortable for you.

CHOOSING WALKING SHOES

The most important factor in choosing good walking shoes is to select a good fit. Select shoes designed specifically for walking, thereby providing comfort and appropriate support. A walking shoe should have a low, rounded heel to allow a good rolling motion from the heel to the toe. The shoe should bend where your foot naturally does and not at the arch. The shoe should also have slight flexibility when you grab the heel and toe and give the shoe a twist. Walking shoes should be replaced about every 500 miles.

HEAT SURVIVAL TIPS

Drink two - four glasses of water each hour. Drink plenty of non-alcoholic fluids. Do not wait until you are thirsty to drink. Thirst is your body’s way of telling you that you’re dehydrated. Avoid very cold drinks, caffeine and high sugar drinks. Sports beverages can replace the salt and minerals you lose in sweat. Eat lightly. High protein foods will increase heat production and water loss, while fatty foods are harder to digest. Eat salads, fruit, jello and vegetables. Try to rest often in the shade. Protect yourself from sunburn, it reduces the body’s ability to cool itself. Listen to your body, slow down and rest as needed. Wear light-colored, light-textured and loose-fitting clothes.

COLD WEATHER WALKING TIPS

Start your walk INTO the wind, so you will finish with it at your back. Drink plenty of fluids. You may not sweat, but breathing in cold air also depletes liquids. Protect your eyes and skin: In winter the earth is closer to the sun than in summer. The sun’s radiation as well as the wind can damage your skin and eyes. Wear sunscreen and sunglasses that screen out the UV rays. Sunlight reflecting off snow can do a lot of damage to your eyes if not screened. Preventing slips: Select routes that are cleared of snow or ice or do not have standing puddles or mud slicks.

TAKING THE FIRST STEP

Walking correctly is very important. Walk with your chin up and your shoulders held slightly back. Walk so that the heel of your foot touches the ground first. Roll your weight forward. Walk with your toes pointed forward. Swing your arms as you walk. If you walk less than three times per week, give yourself more than a week before increasing your pace and frequency.

Keep safety in mind when you plan your route and the time of your walk. If you walk at dawn, dusk, or night, wear a reflective vest or brightly colored clothing. Walk in a group when possible. Notify your local police station of your group’s walking time and route. Do not wear jewelry or headphones.

Walk up and down the aisle of a discount store and around the outside aisle for 550 steps. Walk from one end of Independence Commons to the other for about 825 steps. Walk around a grocery store for approximately 800 steps. The top level of Independence Center is approximately 1,050 steps and the bottom is about 994 steps. 2,000 steps = 1 mile. Going for a walk is a great way to reduce stress and promote an overall sense of wellness. Regular walking can reduce feelings of depression and anxiety. Walking burns approximately the same amount of calories per mile as does running. Walking is the only exercise in which the rate of participation does not decline in the middle and later years. In a national survey, the highest percentage of regular walkers for any group (39.4%) was found among men 65 years of age and older. Walking leads to lean, toned muscles, and keeps bones and joints in shape, minimizing the effects of osteoporosis and arthritis.

CHOOSING A PEDOMETER

A pedometer can give you a more accurate picture of how active you are each day. The pedometer step counter is a small battery operated device that tracks vertical movement of the hip. The pedometer is worn at your waist directly above the knee and records a step each time your hip moves up and down. Wearing a pedometer can help you manage your activity and serve as a constant reminder to get up and move. Your pedometer will measure all activities involving hip movement. To work, the pedometer has to stay upright and not tilt too much. When positioned on a body with a protruding stomach, the pedometer should be worn on the waistband directly below the armpit. Choose a pedometer that is best for you. Basic models count only steps while other models can convert steps to miles and track calories burned. Inexpensive models tend to be noisy, harder to use, not as accurate and will not last long. Buy a safety leash or strap to keep the pedometer from falling off.

Follow these steps:
Wear your pedometer for at least three days from morning until night to determine how many steps you normally take in a day.
Take the total number of steps walked during three days and divide by three for your baseline number of steps per day.
The target goal is 10,000 steps per day.

Simply wearing a pedometer is not enough. You will also need to record your readings.
Once you have reached your goal, maintain that number for at least eight weeks. After that, you may then choose to increase your daily goal or add intensity to your program by walking further or by including more hills and stairs.

SAFETY TIPS

Keep safety in mind when you plan your route and the time of your walk. If you walk at dawn, dusk, or night, wear a reflective vest or brightly colored clothing. Walk in a group when possible. Notify your local police station of your group’s walking time and route. Do not wear jewelry or headphones.

TRAIL ETIQUETTE

Stay on designated trails. Bike riders yield to hikers. Downhill yield to uphill. Use common sense and courtesy. Do not litter. Please do not destroy or remove plants. Keep your pets restrained. Walk on the right. Show courtesy to other trail users at all times. Use the right side and always pass on the left. Respect the rights of property owners. Watch for other trail users. Be especially alert when running. Listen for audible signals and allow faster trail users (runners and bicyclists) to pass safely. Group users allow ample room for others to pass. Always look ahead and behind before passing. Yield when entering and crossing trail. Obey all traffic signals and stop signs.
This park was created in memory of Suzanne McGrath. Suzanne was a nurse at the former Independence Regional Health Center who while running was struck and killed by a car. Her dedication to exercise and fitness encouraged her friends to establish the park in her honor. The purpose of the park is to enrich people’s bodies and minds in a safe environment. The park provides a place to spend quiet moments and a place to pursue a life of fitness and preventive health. An integral part of the park is a memory garden where supporters have purchased stones of varying sizes to be engraved with remembrances or the name of a lost loved one. The park has a playground, benches and lights. (Independence Regional Health Center, 2000)

This park is named after William McCoy, who originally came from Ohio and later became the first mayor of Independence in 1849. "He was a banker and Indian trader and lived there until his death in 1900." (Foerster, 1978, p. 43) The McCoy home is located on Farmer Street, not too far from McCoy Park. William McCoy and his brother John flipped a coin to see if they would stay in Independence or settle in St. Joseph. Needless to say, Independence won. (Henley, 1986, p. 46)

Rotary Park is located in one of the most interesting and historical areas in Independence. Many historians interested in the James Gang (Frank and Jesse James) are aware that this was a popular hangout spot for Frank James, a Santa Fe merchant. He fell in love with Annie Ralston, the daughter of Samuel Ralston, and lived in the large 1850s mansion at 21st Street and Sterling Avenue. Ralston was a teacher at Rock Creek School, a one-room school at the top of the hill, just west of the park. Ralston’s father was opposed to this marriage and the school board refused to void her contract to allow them to get married. That night the schoolhouse burned to the ground, thereby leaving James and Ralston free to marry. The two are buried side by side in the small family cemetery on the north side of Hill Park. James is buried under the alias F. Alexander James to avoid his marker from being vandalized like Jesse James’ marker in Kearney. A Civil War Battle was fought on the hill to the west of the park and the Independence Fair was also located at this spot. (B. Curtis, personal communication, March 2006)
Next to the parking lot of Phil Roberts Park is the old Pitcher Cemetery. The cemetery dates back to the early 1830s. Ledstone Noland, who served in the Revolutionary War, is buried at this cemetery along with Civil War soldiers and the Pitcher Family. The last known burial at this cemetery is believed to have been in 1812.

The park was recently renovated and offers a place of solitude amidst the city traffic. The asphalt trail is level except for the slight incline at the northwest corner. The Chinook Oak tree (with bluebird houses mounted on it) provides shade for the walker. Adjacent to the trail is a 1/4-mile nature trail through a wooded area for a more adventurous walk.

The City of Independence started developing plans for this historic walk in the early 1990s. President Harry Truman, America’s 33rd president, enjoyed walking and history. To honor his love of walking, the City organized the Truman Historic Walking Trail. There are 43 memorable sites along the way that are marked by descriptive plaques. It is said that “no one liked a good walk better than Independence’s own Harry Truman.” Take time to enjoy the sights. (Independence Parks & Recreation Department, 2005)
